In the 18th century a group of racially mixed people established a town down in the western margin of the medium course of the river Tempisque, where a small forest of the name "sietecuernos" was located (Lonchocarpus costericensi); these were the founders of the city of Philadelphia, head of the canton.

The oldest population of the canton is Sardinal, test of it is the mention that is done of the place, because of the visit performed by the end of 1794, by the brother Mr. Antonio Muñoz, in a collects of charity that carried out in various towns of the province of Guanacaste.
